

INTRO:

You would be forgiven for feeling a little overwhelmed with the plight of Australia's wildlife in the face of drought, fire, and landclearing... but there are stories of action and hope out there, and they don't need to be grand to be great.

I now want to tell you about a little boy who's doing his own bit to take on a big problem... the drought.

As his local river gets drier and drier, he's single-handedly relocated more than a hundred native fish to deeper waterholes.

Bronwyn Herbert brings this report for ABC News...

NETIA: RL: Tenterfield Fish Boy AIR

DUR: 2:09